

Luke Kowalski

Vice President of the Corporate Architecture Group, Oracle

Luke Kowalski is a Vice President in the corporate architecture group, reporting to one of Larry Ellison's EVPs. He helps with technology policy, industry standards, community, security, and government affairs. He also works on M&A integration planning with internal counsel and corporate development. He is in charge of a few corporate controls and approvals, including accessibility, interoperability, and external presence.

Before coming to Oracle, he worked for various start-ups in technical, design, and business roles, as well as for Netscape's Server and E commerce divisions. He holds several patents and professional certifications, serves as an ISO representative for US through ANSI and lectures frequently at conferences and universities. His educational background includes advanced degrees from UTA, Pratt Institute, and Columbia University.